Members of the Empire looked on as it was announced that High Inquisitor Purist Pelax had been elevated to the rank of Exarch.

“It has always been clear that there is something special about Exarch Purist Pelax,” noted Exarch Tatiana the Grand Voice, “when we started the search for a new Exarch, there was only one candidate who was capable of representing the Inquisitors at that level.”

“It’s a real privilege to take up this position,” Exarch Purist Pelax remarked. “I can’t wait to find out to try out some of the new powers at my disposal. I heard we have bees now, killer bees. Real, genuine killer bees, technology is amaz-”

This particular Holy Messenger did not wait to hear the rest of the new Exarch’s statement.

The announcement came alongside the release of an updated Inquisitorial Emblem (pictured right), and the news that the High Church was considering an internal restructure.

“It is imperative that the High Church is able to operate as effectively as possible within these uncertain times,” said Exarch Tatiana the Grand Voice. “We will not compromise on our beliefs, and we will continue to work towards stability across the system, as God intended.”
